Huey Long Turns Manhattan Upside Down for Gin Fizz

Goes on 3-Hour Bender—Wires New Orleans for Bar-Tender

BARMAN ON PLANE

New Orleans Expert Flies East to Rescue of Thirsty Senator

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Huey P. Long rolled up his sleeves Thursday in his room at the New Yorker hotel and started a filibuster on gin fizzes that lasted three hours.

It began with the genuine Ramos gin fizz of 1901 and went from there to the five defective congressmen from Louisiana who revolted against the Long dictatorship, and ended up with Huey's scheme for the redistribution of capital wealth and what he would say to John D. Rockefeller and Henry Ford when the time came to divide up their capital incomes.

In the course of the filibuster, which seemed an extension of the Washington filibuster of some weeks ago, the senator brought his audience from the twenty-second floor of the hotel to the barroom on the main floor where he proceeded to illustrate the methods of making a genuine gin fizz with the aid of a bartender he imported overnight from New Orleans.

A Thirst Gets the Best of Him
The story seems to be that Huey, who has been in town for the last three days, has been trying unsuccessfully to get a decent gin fizz and that last night his throat became parched to the degree that he was forced to telephone the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans and order Sam Guarnino, the bartender, to take the next plane to New York.

This is exactly what Sam did, and arrived in Huey's room about 10:30 a. m., after having been announced by a young woman, who later turned out to be Rose Long, Huey's daughter. "Howdy, Sam," Long said. "How do you like yer trip?"

Sam said he liked it. "What do you say, boys we go down to the bar now with Sam?" Huey put on his coat and with Sam and his entourage took the elevator down to the bar. He kept talking all the way, most of the time getting lost in words which jammed up in his mouth and couldn't come out fast enough.

Once in the bar he started giving orders, demanding some powdered sugar and when he was given a bag full stuck in his hand, tasted it and shouted that this wasn't powdered sugar "by no means no how." He handed somebody a $5 bill and told him to come back with some powdered sugar, or else.

Poses for Cameramen
Huey posed continuously for the cameramen. He posed leaning over the bar, shaking the gin fizz, swelling the glass in his hand, rolling the gin fizz, drinking the gin fizz, rolling eyes, snacking his lips, talking, talking.

It went on this way for the better part of two hours. At last Huey seemed to feel that he had enough pictures taken and adjourned with only the newspaper men up to his room. Here he told his familiar story of the redistribution of

The first full year under "repeal" was 1917.

In that interval of 17 years America changed greatly in population and wealth—and habits.

Despite her greater population America legally bought 24 per cent less beer, 48 per cent less wine, and 48 per cent less whisky, in 1934 than in 1917.

Even if you allow for the decline in national purchasing power you still haven't explained so great a drop. Bootlegging is a partial explanation. But this newspaper has pointed out time and again that total liquor consumption today was bound to be adversely affected by the growth of installment buying since the war.

Liquor has vastly more competition today in bidding for the homestead's extra dollar.

There are automobile payments to be met, and payments on radios and refrigerators—all of which are things proven to be greatly desired by men.

Automobiles started the country on its way out of the depression. It is not surprising, therefore, that liquor sales since repeal have been disappointing.

And with a keen realization that installment-payers need most of their dollars for these home purposes The Star has consistently refused to accept hard-liquor advertisements since repeal.

This is not the hysterical wish of a fanatic "prohibi" or "anti"—but a plain recording of facts reasonably interpreted.

Peach Shipping at Nashville Closed

Between 1,000 and 1,200 Carloads Cleared by Rail and Truck

NASHVILLE, Ark.—The harvest of the Elberta peach crop in the Highland district has closed, so far as rail shipments of the peaches is concerned, with only 421 car loads shipped by rail from the district during the season.

The greater part of the crop, however, was moved from the district by trucks, with a probable 1,000 to 1,200 car crop harvested.

While the rail shipments have ceased there are still a good many peaches in the district to be moved as the orchards are gleaned, and trucks are here ready for the gleaning. This fruit is usually the finest of the entire crop, and there will be much greater demand than there is fruit. The gleaning will be finished this week.

The market strengthened a great deal during the past few days, the cash price for good quality peaches during last week. Commercial peaches were in great demand at $1.25 Wednesday and Thursday, and fancy peaches were quoted as high as $3. There was not great demand for fancies, however.

It is safe to estimate that there has been fully a 1,000 car crop of peaches harvested in the district this year, and that the average price per bushel for all kinds was $1 per bushel. There would be approximately 400,000 bushels in the crop, which would mean a return of $400,000 or better to the orchardists. Much of this money has been paid out for labor.

Sterilization by X-Ray, for Cancer

Malignant Disease Frequently Controlled in Female Cases

NEW YORK.—Sterilization by means of high powered X-ray, 200,000 volts of it, 10 times the death dose of the electric chair, is helping women cancer sufferers, report Dr. Richard Dresser, of Huntington, Memorial hospital, Boston, and Dr. C. V. Kilbane, of Misericordia hospital, New York.

Thursday in the new X-ray laboratories at Misericordia, Dr. Kilbane explained that recent experiments of the Harvard Cancer Research Department show that sterilization of women suffers checked secondary cancerous growths in the breast.

"Cancer attacks women chiefly in the breast," Dr. Kilbane said. "After the growth has been removed by surgery, there is a tendency for it to reappear. The shooting of powerful X-rays through the pelvic regions checks this."

"Experiments are now being conducted by Dr. Dresser and others. Dr. Kilbane continued, 'to see whether sterilization will check growth in parts of women's bodies other than the breasts.'"

The cancer itself is also treated directly by X-ray now, according to Dr. Kilbane, and this treatment is gradually taking the place of radium.

But Minnesotans Still Strong for F. D. R., Says Hunt

"Too Many Reformers—Not Enough Radicals," Gov. Olson's View

A SWASHBUCKLER

Hunt Stars Off by Interviewing a Vigorous Swede Governor

In the heart of third party land, Frazier Hunt finds that men's views diverge over the efficacy of the New Deal. This is the fifth of twelve vital articles in which Hunt, on a rambling trans-continental tour, impartially reports popular sentiment as he finds it at the present time, with the 1936 elections looming large on the political horizon.

By FRAZIER HUNT
(Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

Governor Floyd Olson of Minnesota is a radical and proud of it.

"The trouble is we've got too many reformers and not enough real radicals," he said to me in his office in the Capitol building in Minneapolis. Then he added, "My biggest complaint against Roosevelt is that he enervates all middle-letters."

He's just sufficiently radical so that we can't make a real enemy out of him."

Olson is big and blustering and somewhat of a swashbuckler, but he's likable and knows his stuff. From a humble home he fought his way up, studied law at night, became district attorney, ran for governor, was defeated, showed up city gaft in 1923, and was elected governor in '30 and re-elected last year.

In 1936 he will run for the senate on the Farmer-Labor ticket—and will probably be elected. He's already a master at irony and ridicule, and when this big Swede from Minnesota turns loose on the older statesman in Washington, there will be something new for the gossips of the capital to shake

Acquitted in Slaying
PALESTINE, Texas.—(AP)—A district court jury Thursday acquitted J. D. Loper, Cayuga merchant, on a charge of slaying E. T. Skyles last year in the Cayuga oil field town.

The verdict came after several hours deliberation. Loper pleaded self defense and said he shot Skyles after the man had advanced on him with a pocketknife.

War Office Asks 261 Millions Above Regular Military Budget

TOKYO, Japan.—(AP)—The War Office Friday proposed a broad five-year plan for mobilization, improvement and expansion of Japanese land and air armament.

The program, requiring an expenditure of about 261 million dollars, was drafted by the general War Office staff for submission to the cabinet and inclusion in the budget.

This money is in addition to the regular military appropriations.

League Council to Meet July 31 on Crisis in Africa

Litvinoff, Council President, Will Consider Italo-Ethiopia Case

OUTLOOK IS BETTER

Italy Still Willing to Allow Conciliation on African Claims

Copyright Associated Press

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—The League of Nations announced Friday that Maxim Litvinoff, council president and Soviet Foreign Commissioner, planned to call the League council into session July 31 to deal with the controversy between Italy and Ethiopia.

This announcement by a League official followed the receipt of notes from both Ethiopia and Italy, in which each charged the other with responsibility for the East African crisis.

May Conciliate

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—Rome rocked Thursday night to the refrain "Ethiopia for us" shouted from 100,000 Fascist throats as one of the greatest demonstrations in the capital's history gathered at Colonna and Venezia Squares to rear approval of Benito Mussolini's African program.

A particularly frenzied shout swept through the enormous crowd when the Fascist secretary for Rome, Oratio Orzi, assured the crowd that Italy would "be ready for war against black and yellows and, if necessary, blondes."

Previously the demonstrators had shouted their opposition to Ethiopia and her alleged champion, Japan. The crowd took Orzi's mention of "blondes" to refer to British, also accused by Italians of interfering in Africa.

Shortly before the huge demonstration got under way, Italy had expressed her willingness to resurrect the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission.

Telegrams to that effect were sent to Addis Ababa, Geneva and other capitals after visits the British and French ambassadors paid separately to Fulvio Svelto, under secretary for foreign affairs.

The government instructed the Italian minister in Addis Ababa, Count Vinci, to make representations to the Ethiopian government expressing Italy's willingness to attend further sessions of the conciliation commission, which broke down at Scheveningen, the Netherlands, recently.

Italy was represented as believing it was of no use to invoke the League Council until the commission had been given an opportunity to meet again and name the fifth, neutral member provided in the League of Nations' instructions creating it.

Bulletins

HOQUIAM, Wash.—(AP)—Squads of steel-helmeted national guardsmen patrolled strategic centers on Gray's Harbor Friday after a riot in which 500 lumber sympathizers stoned a company of soldiers. The crowd was dispersed with fixed bayonets.

PEORIA, Ill.—(AP)—Three persons, including a woman shopper, were shot and wounded Friday when three payroll robbers hunted police in a downtown gunfight. One robber who gave his name as Ed Mace, of Kansas City, was captured after he was wounded by pursuing police. His two companions escaped with an undetermined amount of money.

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Announcement was made here Friday that all phases of the Rural Resettlement Administration program are expected to be formed and in operation within a few days, as workers started a regional conference here. Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana are included in the area in which plans call for options on 617,000 acres of submarginal lands for converting into public parks, reforestation and other uses with PWA labor.

Bond Purchase by Solon Is Revealed

Coupled With Patton's Receipt of Box at Utility Head's Hotel

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Members of the senate lobby committee expressed surprise Friday at the testimony of Representative Patton, Texas Democrat, that he bought $3,000 worth of bonds during the periods this spring when his salary was only $3,000.

This followed testimony by a surprise witness that he had seen Patton carry a small box away from the hotel room of John Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co. the day before the utility vote.

Alleged "Cigars"

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Questions by the senate lobby committee, intended to reveal contents of the much-discussed "mystery box," Thursday brought testimony that it passed to Representative Patton, Democrat, Texas, from the son of a Texas power official—but contained only cigars.

His memory "refreshed" by phoning his wife at Dallas, Tex., John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light company, said the gift was made, in his presence, a few days before the house vote on abolition of public utility holding companies.

Coincidentally another deadlock and quick adjournment in store Friday for house and senate conferees said they intended to insist that Ben Cohen, an administration aide, and Don Devane, of the Power Commission, be permitted to attend and advise them.

Just as determined was Representative Huddleston, Democrat, Alabama, who Wednesday broke up a scheduled session by objecting to his presence of the two administration men. He contended that to have them there was the equivalent of an attempt "to lobby the conferees."

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, one of the conferees, said it had been "an immemorial custom" to have "experts" attend senate-house conferences, and that he did not intend to change it.

Nail-Picking Car Works Local Road

Highway Department's Magnetic Machine on Lewisville Road

The Arkansas Highway Department's magnetic machine—a device that picks up nails and other metal from the roadbeds of the state highways—was in operation Friday on the Hope-Lewisville road.

The machine was moved here from Highway district No. 7 where it averaged picking up eight pounds of metal from the road per mile.

The machine is the only one of its kind in the state. It travels an average of seven to eight miles per hour.

Hugh Beam, of Little Rock, in charge of the machine, said the mileage to be covered in this district by the magnet contrivance total 743.

Mr. Beam pointed out the advantages and benefits of such a machine, eliminating many punctures for the material—and the possibility of automobile wrecks at high speed.

The device is used only on gravel and dirt roads, Mr. Beam pointing out that the speed of an automobile on pavement tends to knock metal off the highway instead of puncturing auto tires.

Senate Decisively Rejects Proposal Changing Bank Bill

Roosevelt to Use Own Judgment in Administering Silver Purchase

GLASS ON WARPATH

Fiery Virginian Speaks at Length on Reserve Board "Experiments"

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The senate overwhelmingly rejected Friday the Nye proposal for a government-owned central bank, offered as a substitute for the main section of the banking bill placing control of the nation's credit in the hands of seven Federal Reserve board members and five representatives of the regional Reserve banks.

The substitute would have set up "The Bank of the United States of America," with full powers over the issuance of money and the regulation of its value, as an agency of congress.

Firm on Silver Policy

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Suggestions by 46 senators that the administration continue buying silver to push up the price, brought from President Roosevelt a statement that the would execute the silver-purchase law "in a manner most advantageous to the public interest."

Tax Bill Silts House

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Strong criticism and vigorous praise greeted Friday the tentative bill with which Democratic committeemen of the house propose to put the president's tax ideas on the statute books.

The measure is designed to raise an annual sum variously estimated at $50 to $500 million dollars.

In general, the criticism came from two sides—advocates of a balanced budget, many being Republicans; and left-wing share-the-wealth men.

Praise came from many members of the house, including a number of Democrats.

From the senate the same portent of battle appears ahead.

866 MILLIONS FOR AAA

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The AAA announced Friday that the government collected $866,694,982 in processing and related taxes from May, 1933, through May 31, 1935.

The related taxes, it was explained, included ginning taxes on cotton under the Bankhead act.

Glass on Warpath

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The senate heard a blistering attack Thursday by Senator Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, on the monetary views of Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, then approved the 2nd title of a five bank bill, making permanent the temporary deposit insurance law.

Supporters of the compromise measure, which gives the Reserve Board majority control over the nation's credit needs, for the first test when they defeated an attempt by Senator Murphy, of Iowa to strike out a provision requiring state banks with deposits of $1,000,000 or more to become members of the Reserve System by July 1, 1937, to retain deposit insurance.

Deposit Insurance Approved

The Iowa's motion was rejected by a voice vote and then the entire Title One was approved. Under that section, deposits up to $5,000 would be insured. It also lowers the annual assessment of insured banks to one-twelfth of one per cent of total deposits, and provides for suspension of assessments when the insurance fund reaches $500,000,000, to be resumed when the fund is impaired 15 per cent.

With approval of this title, the heart of the bill placing control over credit in a Federal Reserve Board of seven and five representatives of the Regional Reserve banks was taken up.

Markets

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Price declines ranging from three to four points occurred in futures at the opening call Friday on the cotton market.

October opened at 11.39, and then gained one point to 11.40 while December held around 11.32, January 11.31 and March 11.32.

The activities of the cotton pool in the July position held that month in check.

Liverpool cabled that there was a quiet market there in the hours preceding the opening of the domestic exchanges.

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, four to six points decline in response to lower Liverpool cables and under foreign selling. October 11.33, March 11.30, May 11.31, July 11.29.

Doctors Offer Hope for Paralysis Cure

Twenty years ago, doctors had little or no encouragement for persons who were stricken with infantile paralysis. Medical progress toward the solution of his health problem has been moving along rapidly, however, and today the outlook for recovery is very hopeful. In fact, it is not unreasonable to believe that, in the too distant future, the disease will be brought under satisfactory control.

Today, the death rate from infantile paralysis varies. Sometimes one tenth of those who are affected die; sometimes as many as one-sixth.

Epidemics of infantile paralysis vary as well. The disease is much more dangerous to infants under one year of age, and persons over 15, than it is to children between these ages. Fortunately, the disease is very rare among infants.

About one-fourth of those who develop paralyzed limbs recover almost completely. The rest, about 75 per cent, are left with paralysis of various types.

The worst cases occur in children under 10 years of age. Apparently the higher the fever during the acute attack, the more likely is there to be permanent paralysis.

When the condition is discovered, it is customary nowadays to inject into the patient blood serum from a person who has recovered from the disease or that from a normal being.

It is also attempted, in some cases, to use the vaccines which have recently been made by macerating the spinal cords of monkeys after they have been inoculated with infantile paralysis.

Some physicians are convinced that the serum, if given very early in the disease, perhaps even before paralysis sets in, is of great value in preventing a physical defect. This method is still in an experimental stage, but in view of the great threat which infantile paralysis actually is, most physicians are inclined to use the serum.

The completeness of recovery from paralysis depends also to a large extent on what is done.

In the first place, nothing should be done until the severe infection begins to subside. When heat may be applied to the limbs, and there may be massage to benefit the action of the muscles.

Fortunately, orthopedic surgery has developed a considerable number of excellent operations. Transplantation of tendons and muscles, and modifying joints make it possible for some who have been crippled to walk satisfactorily.

It is quite usual for the paralyzed limb to waste away and become smaller and weaker than the normal limb. Sometimes, when a leg becomes shorter, there are attempts to transplant bone to make it longer, and there is another operation which makes the normal leg shorter, so that it will equal the paralyzed leg.

Einstein's Theories Draw a Poet's Fire—Maeterlinck is Eloquent in Book on Modern Science

Maurice Maeterlinck, poet and dramatist, turns his attention to science in "The Supreme Law" and rises to remark that the Einstein theory is neither as important nor as valid as most of us suppose.

Now ordinarily the news that a poet had decided to comment on the most abstruse mathematical proposition known to man would be mildly interesting but not in the least important. But in this case it is different.

In the first place, Maeterlinck knows a thing or two about science himself. And in the second place, he puts his comment into the form of a majestic and lofty prose, the reading of which is a deep emotional experience.

The old Newtonian concepts of space, time and gravitation are still valid, says Maeterlinck. Modern science tends to befuddle itself by erecting theoretical abstractions and then mistaking them for proven truth. It demonstrates the correctness of its views by involved mathematical con-

Banish Dog That Acts Dangerously

"William, I think we had better do something about Majie. He snaps at everyone, and I'm so afraid he'll hurt some child. We don't want anything to happen like last summer when he chewed up Jackie Smith's face. That cost us nearly a hundred dollars for Jackie's treatments—and a lot of friends, too."

"Well, if the boy had stayed out of the yard, he wouldn't have been touched. Majie is a fine fellow and attends to his business. If other people attended to theirs they wouldn't be in any danger."

"I know, William, and I love Majie too. But this year he seems touchy and nervous. He snarls at the grocery boy. My friends are staying away. Today he went across the street to growl at a man selling brooms."

"He's trained for a watch dog, and that includes suspicious characters. 'People selling things aren't suspicious characters. I think he should tie him or muzzle him or send him to the country. I'm afraid he might hurt me. He's your dog, a one-man dog, and he gets jealous of me."

"Sticks to Him Doggedly. 'Majie is a good old scout.' William persisted. 'Come here, fellow. It's all right, boy, you're going to stay right here and be good. You're going to be a good dog, aren't you, lad?'"

"All right," said Mary. "But we're in for something. I feed him and keep his pans clean. I've helped to wash him, and I've kept him warm on cold nights when you thought any place was good enough for him to sleep. You enjoy him and I worry about him, but you're still his god and I am only a nuisance."

"I love dogs better than you do, I think. But I know when it's right to let a big dog run loose among children and when it's not. I think Majie is a menace to the whole community. He never was intended for a city house or a small city lot."

Mary, of course, was right. I, who love dogs almost as I love children, agree with her thoroughly. Whether Majie can help his instincts or not, it not only jeopardizes others but is unfair to him, to keep him in an environment he is not fitted for.

Can't Learn New Tricks. Once dogs are trained for a thing we cannot expect them to have dual personalities or change from watchmen to tail-waggers in a minute. Some dogs have an uncanny ability to differentiate and tell the enemy from the friend, but not all. The dog may be let in for, and that the dog may be killed as a result. And besides, he has no moral right to endanger the neighbors or the neighbors' children—or Mary.

Summer heat makes some dogs nervous. All need much fresh water, good clean food and clean pans washed daily—baths to keep them clean and regular feeding time.

There is little real rubies. Not nearly so much as is talked about. Dogs who bite are dangerous nevertheless. So far this year I have seen results of two such attacks, and they were not pretty to look at. Owners of pets should be certain they are safe. Surely this is not too much to ask."

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Modern Cosmetics Properly Applied Will Improve Looks

With modern cream rouge as light and fluffy as whipped cream, powder which actually clings and lipstick that stains the lips instead of coating them, there is no excuse any girl having off-days as far as her makeup is concerned. Providing the follows a simple, well-planned step-by-step routine, even the busiest woman, without spending too much time or money, always can manage to look well-groomed. The important things are to have good beauty products and a fair amount of skill in their application.

Remember, of course, that healthy living habits make for a flawless skin, and a flawless complexion is the best possible base for "smooth makeup." You should get sufficient sleep, eat regularly and sensibly, drink eight glasses of water a day and take a reasonable amount of daily exercise.

If your skin has a tendency to be dry, apply tissue cream and leave it on for a while. After you have dried your body and used bath powder or toilet water, pat face and neck with a pad that has been dipped in cold skin tonic. This removes every trace of cleansing or tissue cream, makes your skin feel fresh and tends to keep the complexion firm and clear.

Putting on foundation lotion or cream is the next step and a very important one. The beauty ought to choose a shade that matches the tone of your skin, and you must see that it is smoothly blended and quite dry before you start with cream rouge.

If you have difficulty with cream rouge, brush your forehead across a bit of cleansing cream before you dip it into the rouge jar. Then, beginning on the cheek bone, about one-half inch outward from your nose, run your finger along the bone, stopping about an inch in front of the ear.

Go back to the starting point and make a line downward, thereby forming a baseless triangle. Fill in the triangle with fingertips, smoothing down rough edges on the two lines and making the rouge look like natural color. Repeat the same steps on the other cheek.

How to Apply Powder Correctly. You are now ready for powder. Dip a large piece of clean cotton into your face powder and press it firmly against the skin on forehead, face and throat. Powder lavishly and don't JO DARIEN, snatching her first year in college, leaves her father in a state of shock. Jo has a job and secures one time work to a marine supply store. There she meets wealthy, handsome DOUGLAS MARSH who offers her the job of hostess at his tea at Crest Lake. Jo accepts. This causes a quarrel with BRET PAUL to whom she is engaged and Jo breaks the engagement.

She goes to Crest Lake. Her duties are pleasant but Mrs. Marsh's eccentric mother takes a dislike to the girl. DARS MONTGOMERY, a school acquaintance who is jealous of Jo's popularity, comes to the inn. PETER FRAGONET, film actor, and his wife are also guests.

Fragonet takes Jo for a night-boat ride. Mrs. Montgomery, plotting a speedboat crash into the anti-bath and Jo is hurled into the water. She is not injured but suffers from shock. Marsh comes to her and later Fragonet calls.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVII

"THE nurse has taken your tray downstairs," Fragonet replied. He gripped the girl's arm in a hand that trembled. "Jo—I'm a fool to try to talk to you like this when you're ill. But I'm trying to make you see how important it is. I want you enough to give up everything." He released her arm, seemed to control his emotion with effort, and then went on more quietly. "You must feel something toward me. Out there on the lake that day you said you didn't know for certain. Do you know now?"

Jo felt trapped and helpless. She realized that his advantage was unfair, that even his simple question was unfair—as long as there was a Mrs. Fragonet. And yet she felt drawn toward this man, not because of his place in a world of women, but rather because he was so like a willful child. She sensed rather than knew the tragedy of such a life, a life made up of so many easy conquests that one barrier meant almost madness.

No, he had no rights, none in the world—but he was in love with her, and he had risked his life for her. Whatever else there was to consider, these things couldn't be discounted now.

She looked half-fearfully into his dark eyes, summoning the courage to begin. "I like you, Peter. . . but I don't want to say that I love you, because I—I don't know." She smiled. "You see, I have to be careful. I thought I was in love once, not so very long ago. It seemed the most important thing in the world, this I told to a certain one man, and marry him, and then one night—just with a few words—everything was finished. But I keep on living, and I don't think about him very much now. And what I feel for you isn't at all what I felt for Bret Paul."

"How do you know that was love?" Fragonet asked. "You were a girl then, and now you're a woman. I've watched you grow into a woman in the short time I've been at Crest Lake. You're years older now than you were that day we rode from the station in Marsh's car. You can't be sure at all that you loved this boy at the university."

"I know I can't, Peter. That's true. And I may not know for a long time."

"Until you really fall in love, perhaps?" Fragonet said.

"Perhaps. . . ." She returned his gaze steadily, but there was something in her eyes which begged him to leave her now, to give her time to think things out. He regained his feet uncertainly and stood looking down at her. "Jo, if only you wouldn't be so afraid," he said. "If only you'd let down your shield. . . ."

He broke off suddenly and dropped to his knees beside the bed, taking her in his arms. "Peter! You—"

But Fragonet's lips cut off her words and he held her helpless in his arms. Weak with fury, Jo held her clenched fists against his shoulders, and as he released her she struck him across the mouth with all the strength at her command. She was about to speak when an other voice bit like acid into the silence of the room. It was Edna Fragonet's, and just beyond her Jo saw Mrs. Marsh!

"A very pretty performance, Miss Darien," Edna Fragonet was saying, "but it would have been more convincing if you hadn't seen me first."

Poor Jo could only sag there helplessly against the pillows, her mouth foolishly open. Between her anger at Fragonet and astonishment at the sudden appearance of his wife she could find no words at all. But instantly Fragonet faced the two women in the doorway.

"Let's not have one of your scenes, Edna. I assure you I'm entirely to blame." He managed a very smile, and in that moment Jo saw the Fragonet who was the actor. He was acting now, just as she had seen him dozens of times on the screen.

"I've no intention of making a scene," his wife answered coldly. "Mrs. Marsh and I had intended to pay a sick-room visit, and we were quite unaware that we'd be interrupting."

Mrs. Marsh had glanced at Jo only once, and now her manner seemed to say that as far as she was concerned Joanne Darien did not exist. Turning her back upon Jo, she addressed Edna Fragonet in a voice as cool as if it were commenting on the weather.

"Please don't let this disturb you, Mrs. Fragonet. I'm sure that, like most men, Peter is unduly chivalrous. I haven't been entirely asleep the past few weeks and I know where to lay the blame. I'll have Douglas take care of the matter in the morning."

SHE started from the room, but Fragonet detained her. "Just a moment, Mrs. Marsh. It will do you no good to talk to Doug. I'm going to give him the whole story. He whined desperately toward his wife. 'What's the use of pretending any longer? I'm damned tired of pretense. This has got to be the finish, Edna! He stopped suddenly, then went on in almost a whisper. "I don't suppose anything I can ever do or say will make up for what I've done to you. Jo." He seemed about to add something else, shrugged helplessly, and was gone.

Jo lifted herself upright, trembling in every fiber. "Mrs. Fragonet, you must listen to me a moment. . . ."

But Edna Fragonet's eyes were points of ice. "Listen to you, Miss Darien? I'm afraid it is you who must listen to me. Perhaps you tried to obtain a smooth surface immediately. Simply leave it blotchy until you have put on lipstick. Then smooth down with the reverse side of the cotton pad or a soft baby brush.

Lipstick should be applied from corner of lips that have been wiped quite dry. Let it set for at least two minutes, and wipe off the excess with cleansing tissue. Don't moisten your lips until the color has had a chance to set on has been wiped dry. This way, lipstick will stay on for hours.

Mascara, if you insist on using it in the daytime, goes on last. Comb your hair and touching your ears and wrists with light, daytime perfume are the final steps.

Cardinals Beaten Twice by Giants

Drop Doubleheader, Closing Disastrous "Crucial Series"

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—The New York Giants left town Thursday night after cleaning up their final doubleheader with the Cardinals, 3 to 1 and 13 to 2. Thursday afternoon with a wider margin of National League leadership.

The double triumph, which gave the Giants four in a row after they had dropped the first two games of the series, put New York three full games ahead of the Chicago Cubs in the second place race to the run.

A crowd of 28,500 paid turned out for today's double-header, making a total of 76,000 in four days. That was the best week-day attendance on record here except for world series games.

Hal Schumacher pitched brilliantly in the opener until the heat forced him out in the seventh and while he was recovering in the clubhouse, Allyn Stout completed the job of pitching a five-hit game.

Meanwhile Paul Dean, who held the Giants to four blows Tuesday, gave up that many in the fourth inning and tossed in a wild pitch and an intentional pass for good measure to give New York all runs. The Cards' only run was unearned, coming when Harry Danning dropped a throw to the plate in the second inning.

Once ahead, the Giants made it a runaway in the second game. They piled up a safe lead against Bill Hallahan in two innings shattering his six-game winning streak, and finished with a 17-hit total in which every regular had a share. Roy Parmelee pitched a four-hit shut-out for 7 2-3 innings, then lost it when Jim (Ripper) Collins hit his nineteenth home run of the season.

Two errors by Leo Durocher paved the way for the Cards' downfall. After Critz singled to start the third, Durocher dropped Hallahan's throw to second for a forced play. Then a walk and a wild pitch let in a run. The sacks were loaded again by a pass and Durocher let Danning's smash go through his legs for another error and two more runs came in. Solid hitting produced the other three and sent Hallahan to the showers.

The Giants had scored twice in the second and they collected four more off Rookie Al Eckert in the fourth. Their final tally came in the eighth with Phil Collins on the hill when Manager Frank Frisch, subbing for Pepper Martin at third, uncorked a three-base wild throw.

Iron-Starved BLOOD

Thousands Feel Only "Half-Alive"

When you foolishly let work or worry get you down nerves soon begin to go ragged—every little thing upsets you—that's the time to look out for trouble in the home.

Most nervous troubles are brought on by allowing a run-down, debilitated condition of the body to continue and that's not only foolish but reckless, especially when there is such a simple, easy, yet most effective way to straighten yourself out.

Make This 3 Day Test Go to Ward & Son, or any first class druggist and get a bottle of Clements' Tonic—the new concentrated form of iron—Take two of these little tablets with a glass of water three times a day before meals. In 3 days you'll feel entirely different—better—new peace stealing all thru your body. Sleeplessness disappears—you'll enjoy a good night's rest again.

Naturally and without any false stimulation you feel the benefits of Clements' Tonic. It enriches the blood and sends it coursing thru your body bringing new strength—steady nerves—stimulating appetite and giving you the will to do things.

Clements' Tonic is dispensed in your city by Ward & Son and all first class drug stores.

Although early pictures of ostriches showed them calmly swallowing horseshoes, keys, etc., and the early imaginative naturalists declared that the birds ate nothing but iron, they never explained where this diet was to be found on the African plains.

Do you ever look back at the close of day
To the hours you've spent for others,
To precious time in work or play
When you tried to make men brothers?

Do you ever look back at the end of the day
To the goal you might have won?
But you put it aside till you had more time,
And the joy was never done.

If you think of some good to do, my friend,
Begin it now. Today!
Tomorrow's a long way off, my friend,

Scorpion Takes Two Out of Three Falls on First Mat Card Here

The "Red Scorpion" took the first and third falls from "Wild Bill" Jefferies in the feature event of a wrestling program Thursday night at Fair Park arena.

The two professional grapplers furnished more than 100 spectators many thrills with chin lifts and flying tackles in a rough and tumble exhibition.

The "Red Scorpion" won the first fall with a complicated leg twist in 12-1-2 minutes. He won the decision with the same hold in the third fall. "Wild Bill" Jefferies took the second fall in 16 minutes with a back bend.

Franky Hill, University of Southern California athlete, won over Andy Tremaine, Australian youngster, in the opening battle. Hill triumphed with two straight falls, using a leg spring on both occasions.

The first fall required 20 minutes and the second 18.

The Scorpion, however, he is, and Hill will wrestle here next Thursday night. The Scorpion entered the ring bedecked in red from head to foot and wearing a mask.

Bert Mauldin and Donald Moore, promoters, said Friday that the opening program attracted a larger crowd than expected. The fight program next Thursday will be announced Monday.

The two Hope promoters, working with Tony Bernadi match-maker of Little Rock, said that some of the best wrestlers and fighters in this section would be brought here in the future.

Olson unquestionably likes the idea of a strong radical national third party, but I have a feeling that, along with the LaFollettes and some of the Dakota boys, he doesn't quite feel the urge to make the big sacrifice himself.

The Row-down
A man I met in the reception hall outside the Governor's office tipped me off to what looks like the low-down here in this seething northwest.

"It doesn't look as if the third party people can center on one personality," he told me. "There are so many strong picturesque characters, each carrying his own brand of ax to grind, that it will be almost impossible for them really to join together their fortunes. It takes a tremendous amount of crusader spirit and a flaming idealism to go through with a real third party fight."

"Huey will run for the Senate, and so will Olson, and Phil LaFollette will be busy with his next race for governor. The Dakotas have no figure half big enough to lead the cause—even if they could all center on one platform. My own studied opinion is that there will be a lot of pre-convention talk, and that Huey may go into the Democratic convention with three or four state delegations pledged to him—and then it will all slowly peter out. Huey and the others have their eyes peeled on 1940. Roosevelt alone has the combination for 1936."

The colored doorman at the Noll Hotel confirmed in rather less elaborate terms this general conclusion. "I'm for Olson, but I'm for Roosevelt, too," he told me. "My folks is all for him. He'll carry the Twin-Cities like them other people was nailed down."

Successful Cooperation
But driving out from Minneapolis to Farmington to visit the new $350,000 co-op creamery plant, I got the other side of the picture from conservative, hard-headed W. S. Moser—who incidentally is president of the Twin-City Milk Producers Association, which is one of the most successful co-operative organizations in the United States.

"If the government will simply withdraw and let business alone we'll have the biggest boom in history," he said with some vehemence. "Our banks are full of money eager to be safely invested. But there is no confidence. Everyone is afraid of what the government may do. . . . Our people need new supplies of everything that's made. For four or five years we've all been coasting along. Why, our farmers alone need to spend from five to ten billions to put their farms and buildings in shape. Man alive! Once we get going we could consume all that our factories working three shifts could turn out for the next five years. But right now, with the government interfering, men with money and the tools are afraid to move."

"Roosevelt said at the start that he'd acknowledge the failure of any of his pet schemes if they didn't pan out. Let him do it now—and let us get back to work and have real boom days."

That's no old-fashioned, individualistic, hide-bound ancient talking, but the able and active head of a co-operative organization that has made history. It's an interesting type, but the great co-op business that he has had so much to do with is even more interesting. Here is a farm-owned organization that furnishes 90 per cent of the fluid milk used by the Twin Cities. It has $500,000 cash reserves today, and is as sure and solvent as the Mississippi is wet.

A Lesson Learned
It is one of three great co-op institutions centering in these remarkable Twin Cities of the northwest. The second is the vast Land O' Lakes Creamery, that last year did a total business of $32,500,000 and in the fiscal year of 1932 reached a grand total of almost $50,000,000. It spreads over parts of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska and South Dakota, and is now going into Illinois. It is owned outright by 485 independent co-op creameries and 124 cheese factories. The true secret of its phenomenal success lies in its expert and almost inspired management, and in the fact that it has developed a national trade mark that ranks with another great co-operative-owned trade mark—Sun-Kist.

Figures do not thrill me particularly, but I did get a kick out of the gross goods that this farmer-owned outfit put out last year: 84 million pounds of butter; 25 million pounds of cheese; four and one-half million dozen eggs, etc. And besides its selling 40 million pounds of its members' 40 million pounds of flour and feed alone.

The third co-op history-maker is the Central Co-op Association comprising 587 local livestock shipping co-ops over the northwest. This organization now controls 35 per cent of the total livestock business of the St. Paul yards, and last year did a gross in excess of $14,000,000—returning more than $149,000 in profit to the locals.

Here in the northwest men do not entirely leave either to Fate or Chance. They are learning slowly how to work and live together. Only a small per cent of their many co-operative adventures have succeeded, but out of their experiences they have gleaned the lesson that co-op enterprises must have the same type of high-class management that private business has.

Through years of trial they have learned that they must pay competitive wages to the men running their affairs.

Here on these dairy farms in the northwest one sees independent, able, hard-working men and women who have found through bitter experience that in both business and government they must work together in order to get what they want. They have learned to look after themselves. They look for neither gifts nor miracles from Washington.

Senator Robinson

national Democratic administration and President Roosevelt.

He said that Chairman Fletcher of the National Republican Committee, Senator Huey Long of Louisiana, J. P. Shouse, head of the American Liberty League, and Senator Hastings are "typical conspirators" in the combination of Old Guard Republicans, disgruntled Democrats and exponents of many varieties of impracticable schemes.

Asserting that the leaders of these groups have united to seize control of the government, Senator Robinson said they have no common social or political viewpoint, but their principles are divergent and conflicting.

He said the Republicans are so hopelessly divided that they dare not discuss openly candidates for the presidential nomination because such discussion would provoke irreconcilable differences. They do not hold national conferences but resort to regional gatherings "to escape the disintegration which is inevitable when they attempt to construct a platform," he said.

Senator Robinson characterized reports that President Roosevelt is in ill health as the "most unjust and malicious campaign of falsehood in the history of the country."

"My duties require me to be in daily conference with the president," he said. "I saw and talked to him Tuesday, the day I started for Arkansas, and I am glad to tell you that he is in better health now than he was at the beginning of his administration. He was radiant, happy and cheerful, when I asked him if he cared to send a message to the Young Democrats and the women Democrats of Arkansas, he said: 'Tell them to continue their good work to strengthen the weak knees and stiffen the backbone of some of the Democrats who are trying to run out on us.'"

He said President Roosevelt had promised that he would visit Arkansas some time this fall.

Declaring that passage of the new agricultural adjustment bill just before he left Washington was a great victory for the administration, Senator Robinson said: "Even Long of Louisiana, after besmirching the motives of the president, did not have the nerve to vote against it, but tried to make a speech in announcing his vote."

He said he objected when Long said he was ashamed to vote for the bill but would have to support it, and that the presiding officer ruled Long out of order.

Senator Robinson's remark that Long "Does not know what he represents but is hell-bent to represent it," was greeted with applause.

Government Bank

Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, offered a substitute providing for a government-owned central bank. Its defeat was predicted by Democratic leaders.

Glass denied the bill was "an administration" measure. He declared he was "amused" at Governor Eccles' proposal to prevent inflation through delegation of more power to the Reserve Board than the compromise provides.

"It is suggested," Glass asserted, "that the chief advocate of Title Two is in a nervous state of anxiety lest we should have inflation in this country. He wants to prevent inflation and deflation.

Terms Eccles "Inflationist"
"Well, we already have more deflation than may be remedied in the next 10 or 20 years to come. As for inflation, I'm amused that the sponsor of this bill wants to prevent inflation, because of all the inflationists he has exceeded the group."

Glass said that Eccles, the "newest member of the board, never had a day's association with a Federal Reserve bank in his life, but proceeded within 90 days after his nomination to propose revolutionary changes in the system."

The Virginian added that the board "has never had a magician in its membership and hasn't got one now."

Speaks of "Jealousy"
Discussing the provision barring interlocking directorates except to permit a commercial or private banker to serve on his own board, the board of "one" other bank. Glass spoke of "jealousy" on the part of an unnamed New York banker of some of his private banking competitors.

"The gentleman who has made the most furor about this provision," he said, "is a great banker whose institution engaged in more vicious and hurtful transactions than any other bank on the American continent and lost millions upon millions of dollars in the process."

"He seems to entertain a jealousy of one or two private bankers in his city, and through his jealousy of them and enmity toward them, he has stirred up a fuss about this interlocking director provision which permits commercial and private bankers to serve on one other bank board."

Nye's Proposal
Nye's proposal substitute would create a "bank of the United States of America" to be the agency of Congress in issuing money and regulating its value.

Modified to provide for a board of directors of 48, one from each state, appointed by the president instead of elected by popular vote as originally framed, the central bank idea, except for that change, was that of Father Charles E. Coughlin of Detroit.

County Too 'Broke' to Try Murderer

Massachusetts May Accept Guilty Plea on Second Degree Charge

WORCHESTER, Mass.—The poverty of Worcester county may enable Newell P. Sherman, choir singer, Scout-master and death young husband, to escape the death chair, despite his confession that he drowned his wife, Alice mother of two small children.

Assistant District Attorney Alfred B. Cenedella said Thursday he had a first degree murder charge clinched on the burly, blubbery slayer, after listening to the complete story of Esther Magill, the "other girl" in the "American tragedy" case. But to save the expense of a trial, scheduled for September 2, it was intimated that the prosecution might accept a plea of second degree murder. This would give the hymn singing Sherman a mandatory life sentence, and permit of his parole after 14 years, if his prison behavior is good.

The slayer's parents, however, have retained a lawyer and indicated they would go into court with an insanity plea. This will be based on the claim that when Sherman, now 26, was a child, he was struck on the head by flying debris from an explosion near his home. As a result he underwent an operation for a mastoid at Memorial hospital here, it was said.

wealth, the capital tax levy, the limitation of private incomes to $15,000,000 and the rest of the whole business.

After losing his show at the bar, Senator Long made the definite announcement that he would bolt President Roosevelt and the Democratic national convention in 1936 unless the president drops his New Deal program and proceeds at once to carry out a program for redistribution of wealth. The senator charged the president with "betraying his promises to the people" and accused him of pursuing a policy "combining the worst features of 'concentrated capitalism, Stalinism and Hitlerism.'"

"I won't hesitate to bolt the Roosevelt New Deal convention," Senator Long said. "I'll never say Roosevelt is a candidate in Louisiana or any other state where I have anything to say unless he stops deliberately perverting the course he promised the people to follow."

The president "is no good" and "hasn't a sincere bone in his body," Senator Long said.

Roosevelt Flayed by Colonel Knox

Aims to Hurt Supreme Court, Says Chicago News Publisher

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher, accused President Roosevelt and his advisors of promoting enactment of laws "for the deliberate purpose of undermining the power and prestige of the supreme court," Thursday.

Colonel Knox, mentioned as a possible Republican presidential candidate, said his party is "welding together, in well-rounded form, a program of laws and policies upon which it will go to the country with prospects of victory, as policy after policy of the Democrats crumbles before the remorseless force of law, logic, and human experience."

Referring to his charge concerning the Supreme Court, Colonel Knox, who spoke before the Los Angeles County Republican Assembly, said:

"With a full sense of the meaning of my words, I ask, are such acts in accord with the sacred oath taken not only to defend and to protect, but to preserve the constitution?"

"I charge the president and his advisors with deliberately promoting enactment of a group of laws which they have declared unconstitutional as soon as they reach the supreme court, and with doing so for the deliberate purpose of undermining the power and prestige of the supreme court and of precipitating attacks upon it in the hope that its unique power, as a coordinate branch in the American government, to pass upon the constitutionality of laws enacted by the legislative branch, will be destroyed."
